Basic resident register and personal seal

1 Administration procedures at city hall

When you changed a place of residence, first register your change of address in the city, town or village you lived in before moving. You should receive a change of address certificate.

Next bring the certificate to City Hall within 14 days of moving. Be sure to bring your resident card or special certificate of permanent residence.

As a rule, you must register your change of address in person, but a representative with proper authority may register for you.

◆ Requesting a basic resident register

On July 9th, 2012, the alien registration system was abolished. In its place, a new residency management system was started for foreigners and Japanese alike. Instead of a certification of information recorded on foreign residents (gaikokujin toroku genpyo kisai jiko shomeisho), foreign nationals will now receive a basic resident register (juminhyo).

Thus, if there are Japanese and foreign nationals in the same household, you can receive a certificate which shows information for all family members.

Section	Fee (1 copy)	Necessary documents
Citizen's service	300 yen	1) For yourself: a resident card (zairyu card), special permanent resident certificate (tokubetsu eijusha shomeisho) or driver's license (unten menkyosho), that includes a picture of your face that was issued an official government office. The item must not be expired. 2) Member of your household: same as 1) 3) As a representative of requester: written authorization from the requester, or other document from 1).

※If the above documents are not available, then a combination of two of the following are acceptable: health insurance card (kenko hokensho), pension book (nenkin techo), bankbook (yokin ts ucho.) or hospital/clinic patient card (shinsatsu ken).

◆ Personal seal registrations

You can register only one seal per person. The seal must show a name or part a name which appears on your basic resident register. Please check with the Citizen's Section before registering your seal.

》 Taxes

Taxes (zeikin) are divided into two categories: national taxes and local taxes. National taxes include income tax, corporate tax, inheritance tax, and sales tax. There are two kinds of local taxes. One is the prefectural level tax, which includes prefectural resident tax and vehicle tax. Another is the city, or municipal tax-level, which includes municipal tax, fixed assets tax and light vehicle tax.

◆Municipal tax and prefectural resident tax and income tax(national tax).

If you reside in Dazaifu on January 1st of the current year, the city will assess municipal (shiminzei) and prefectural (kenminzei) resident taxes, based on your salary from the previous year. Even if you currently have no income, you will still be assessed these taxes.

If the resident taxes are deducted from the salary, your employer will make the payments each month from June to May the next year. If those taxes are paid by individuals, the payment are made on June, August, October and January.

Even if you transferred to overseas, you reside in Dazaifu on January 1st that year, you are assessed the resident taxes.

As same as the resident taxes, "Income tax (shotokuzei)"the national tax is imposed on income earned in a one-year period from January to December. Even if you leave Japan for a period of time, you are required to file taxes. In case the income tax is collected from wages such as part-time jobs, if you file an income tax return at the tax office, some income tax may be subject to refund.

Income taxes are the responsibility of the individual. The filing period is from February 16th through March 15th. But if the source of your earnings are from a sole employer, who withholds taxes on your behalf and conducts a year-end withholding adjustment, then you do not need to file a tax return. (cannot declare an income tax return at city hall)

》 Natural disaster (typhoon and earthquake)

◆ Typhoon

In Japan, typhoon season usually lasts from July through October. In a typhoon, heavy wind and rain can cause flooding and structures to collapse. In order to lessen the danger posed by typhoons, please take the following precautions:

1. Keep informed of the current situation via radio or TV.
2. Evacuate indoors. Refrain from going outside-- the high winds of a typhoon can cause objects to fly through the air, potentially causing harm.
3. Move potted plants and bicycles to inside the house or fix them before the typhoon arrives.
4. Close the storm shutters to protect windows from flying objects caused by strong winds.
5. Get prepared to evacuate if you are on a mountain, a slope, or a lower ground such as near a river.
6. Have a flashlight and portable radio ready in case of a power outage.
7. Keep an adequate amount of emergency food and water on hand.

◆ Earthquake

Japan is a country that experiences many earthquakes. After a big earthquake, aftershocks may occur afterwards. In order to lessen the danger posed by earthquakes, take the following precautions:

1. Protect yourself from falling objects during the shaking (ex. getting under a table).
2. Turn off any fires after the tremors of the earthquake stops.
3. Keep entrance doors open as a means of escape.
Don't escape in a panic.
4. If a fire breaks out, let people know first then extinguish it immediately.
5. Because of the risk of falling objects, avoid narrow streets and concrete-block walls.
6. Mountain and cliffs pose landslide dangers.
Avoid walking near them.
7. Evacuate to the evacuation site by foot.
8. Work with others to provide aid and relief.
9. Get accurate information from the radio or TV.

Make it a habit to remember your designated evacuation area, as well as the evacuation route.
